

Talent2 don hoodies again for the second AIME National Hoodie Day

July 21st 2011

Talent2 has worked with Indigenous organisations, including AIME (Australian Indigenous Mentoring Experience), for a number of years to create employment and school based training opportunities for Indigenous Australians. Today is AIME National Hoodie Day, and Australians are donning their AIME Hoodies and jumping online to spread their support for Indigenous success.

AIME uses a dynamic education-based mentoring program to link university students one-on-one with Indigenous high school students. Last year the program saw 100% Year 12 completion for participating Indigenous students, with a further 38% heading to university. AIME also offers the opportunity for volunteer university mentors to gain invaluable experience working with Indigenous high school students, and offers a great base for university marketing and recruitment with AIME facilitating the development of long-term partnerships between local high schools and the university.

Follow this link to find out more information: <http://www.nationalhoodieday.com/>

